

Grant Recipient

Dr. Sarah Hercula

Assistant Professor of Applied Linguistics

Department of English and Technical Communication

Activities

- ❖ My paper session was entitled “Confronting Linguistic Privilege: The Role of Race and Gender in Shifting Students’ Language Ideologies”
- ❖ I met with several publishers to discuss a book project in order to assess its fit for their press.
- ❖ I met several other teachers/researchers in my area of expertise by speaking to presenters following their paper sessions.

Proposal

- ❖ American Association of Applied Linguistics (AAAL)
- ❖ March 24–27, 2018 in Chicago, IL
- ❖ Budget:
 - Conference Registration: $210
 - Airfare: $257
 - Hotel: $737
 - Total: $1204
- ❖ AAAL offers colloquia, paper sessions, plenary presentations, and networking opportunities among some of the leading researchers in applied linguistics both nationally and internationally.

Outcomes

- ❖ I will be revising my paper presentation into an academic article, which I will submit for publication in a journal in the field of applied linguistics.
- ❖ I will be following up with the publishers I met at the conference and will submit my book proposal for publication consideration in the coming months.